

Film: The Power Game

Location: USA and Turkey

What are the rules of the 'power game'? Is the metaphor of a game useful here?
What kinds of women and men are shown in this film? What women and men are not depicted?
Isn't the film ultimately suggesting that women with power only have it because men have given them the chance to influence them?
Why do women with power make people uncomfortable (as the film suggests)?
Why might the power game be changing in today's democratic states? (Or is it?)
What makes women vulnerable in Turkey?
Why can't Turkish women make changes to the way in which women are viewed?
